

Board of Examining Chaplains: Report to Diocesan Convention 2018

The Board of Examining Chaplains (BEC) works in partnership with the Commission on Ministry (COM) to support candidates for ordination to both the diaconate and priesthood in their formation and to ensure that the academic and intellectual requirements and competencies specified in the Canons as required for ordination are met. The work of the BEC involves working with those in the formation process, both advising and tracking their academic progress. As each candidate is making final application for ordination, the BEC offers its certification to the COM, Standing Committee, and Bishop that the individual has met the academic criteria for ordination.

Candidates for the diaconate are required by the canons to demonstrate proficiency in five areas: Academic studies including Holy Scriptures, theology, and the tradition of the Church; Diakonia and the diaconate; Human awareness and understanding; Spiritual development and discipline; and Practical training and experience. Candidates are invited to demonstrate their proficiencies through preparation of Learning Portfolios, compiled over the course of their formation, which they present to members of the BEC and COM.

Candidates for the priesthood are required by the canons to demonstrate competency in seven areas: Holy Scripture, History of the Christian Church, Christian Theology, Christian Ethics and Moral Theology, Christian worship according to the Book of Common Prayer, the Hymnal and additional Texts authorized for use by the Episcopal Church, and the Practice of Ministry in Contemporary Society. The Episcopal Church administers the General Ordination Examination each January to individuals nominated by their Bishops, who have completed or who are nearing completion of their academic studies. The BEC utilizes the GOE exams in conjunction with the academic records of candidates to certify candidates' competencies.

The 2018 year has been quiet for the BEC in that we did not have any candidates requiring certification for ordination, and so we were able to invest energy into the way in which we provide support to candidates involved in diaconal formation through the Province I School for Deacons. Our first "class" preparing Learning Portfolios (in Spring 2016) helped us to understand the need for greater assistance with the process of Portfolio Development, and so in 2017-8 a subcommittee from the BEC has served as Advisors to individual candidates in Deacon School, reading and providing feedback on materials they were developing for their Portfolios.

The ministry of the BEC is important for the Diocese as part of the process of raising up persons to serve in the ministry, and so it is a privilege for all of us who serve on the committee. I am grateful for the diligent and faithful work of BEC members in the past year. Serving on the Board in 2017-8 were Rev. Jesse Abell, Rev. Hilary Bogert-Winkler, Dr. Tamson Jones Farmer, Dr. Richard Kimball, and Rev. Barbara Thrall.

Respectfully submitted,
Rev. Dr. Molly Scherm
